One of the things I wish for:

To be in a deposition and ask Hinman: Why would you gratuitously give a speech providing regulatory clarity for #ETH?

Does he see any conflict with the fact that he was paid $15 million from his law firm that was a member of the Ethereum Alliance?

JUST ADDED to CryptoLaw:

✓ New blog post by @JohnEDeaton1 examining the documented facts on how Jay Clayton, William Hinman and Marc Berger have clear personal financial interests linked to their official acts while at the SEC.

You just want to hear him lie more? Because that stuff is foregone John.

 And in my opinion, bringing down a US product/company whilst promoting a non-US product is, borderline, treason.

John is there a chance that the blatantly corrupt Hinman and Clayton can be sued?

They can be but because of qualified & sovereign immunity issues (similar to what police officers have when acting within the scope of duty), the case usually gets dismissed against them. If you can prove criminal conduct & intent then you can get over the immunity. It's not easy
